PARKER AND DAVIS SETTLE THAT POINT AT ROSEMOUNT.

The Judge Welcomes His Running Mate to Esopus-Candidates' First Meeting -They Discuss Chairmanship With Campau and Mack-All Want Gorman

Esopus, N. Y., July 20.-Judge Parker met his running mate this afternoon. To say that he and the grand young octogenarian from West Virginia were delighted to be acquainted may be encroaching on the verbal prerogatives of Sagamore Hill. But it is quite true.

Not only did the candidates chat and pose for photographs, but they settled a question that has been agitating Democratic breasts for days. When Judge Parker came out on the veranda late in the afternoon to escort Henry Gassaway Davis to the railroad station he said to the newspaper

"We agreed to-day that the notifications shall be in our respective States."

Therefore there will be no cause for calousy in West Virginia and only one star in the notification ceremony at Rose mount, for it is there that Judge Parker will be informed of his nomination for President. It is not certain that Mr. Davis will be notified at Elkins. That is a matter for him to decide, and he may choose some more central point.

The candidates probably will be notified on the same day, but the date has not been settled and may not be fixed upon for a week. The announcement of the date will come from here.

Ex-Senator Davis arrived at 12:17 P. M. With him were his secretary, C. M. Hendley, and two national committeemen, Norman E. Mack of New York and Daniel J. Campau of Michigan. Judge Parker's wagonette was waiting at the station and beside it stood the Judge's secretary, Arthur Mo-Causland, and his son-in-law, the Rev. Charles Mercer Hall. Mr. Mack, Mr. Campau and Mr. Davis stepped out of the drawing room car in the order named. Mr. Hall greeted Mr. Mack, who introduced Mr. Davis and Mr. Campau to the clergyman and Mr. McCausland. Now came a stampede of flery photographers not to be denied. Mr. Mack saw the look in their eyes and told Mr. Davis that he might as well surrender. The candidate for Vice-President took the situation with good heart and stood his ground, while the clicking of the shutters made a din louder than the noise of the carpenters at work on the new station.

At last the plates and films gave out. and the visitors and the reception committee got into the wagonette and started over the hills to Rosemount.

Judge Parker came out, having discarded his favorite garb of white for more formal clothes. He greeted Mr. Mack, who presented Mr. Davis. The nominees shook hands warmly, but spoke only for an instant. Mrs. Parker came out of the house and the visitors were presented. The advance guard photographer started to get within range, but Judge Parker waved him away and he had to do his snap-

Mr. Mack and Mr. Campau went indoors with Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Hall and Judge Parker and Mr. Davis were left alone on the veranda save for the score of photographers, more or less belated, who came trooping up the path and tried to get in their licks. Seeing that the heads of the Mack and Mr. Campau made a tour of the farm under the guidance of Judge Parker's brother. When they returned it was time for luncheon, and the candidates went into

After luncheon Judge Parker and Mr. Davis consented to pose for any one photographer just as Col. Roosevelt and Senato Fairbanks posed at Sagamore Hill. Chairs were placed under the trees at the north of the house and the nominees sat side by side and looked pleasant. The news of the posing fairly flew and the New York photographer turned pale with rage as he saw his less privileged rivals come snooping across the lawn like coyotes in scent of beef. In vain his assistants danced about to obscure the view of the butters-in. The snapshooters could focus more quickly than their favored rival and they took a dozen pictures before his work was done. The candidates appeared oblivious to the Then came another conference between the candidates, and Mr. Mack and Mr. Campau took one of the Judge's carriages and went for a drive to see Mr. Sheehan's home, Atwood. Mr. and Mrs. Sheehan were in New York.

Mr. Campau did not return to Rose mount. He went to Highland and thence by ferry to Poughkeepsie to get a train for Detroit. Mr. Mack returned about 5 o'clock and had a talk with Judge Parker. At 5:30 P. M. it was time for Mr. Davis and Mr. Mack to start for the station. Mr. Davis just beamed as he came out on the veranda with Judge Parker. They had settled on separate notifications, and the Judge announced it.

Some one complimented Mr. Davis on his youthful appearance. "I don't feel my age," he said as he sprang into the wagonette. "Judge, Parker has made me feel like a boy." The Judge followed Mr. Davis into the vehicle, and Mr Davis was asked whether he was going to take him to West Virginia. "No," said Mr. Davis. "But he will go some day soon." So it is supposed that

All Esopus was at its doors when the two candidates drove down to the station. Even the pickerel in Rush's pond, alias lake George, jumped up to see the sight While waiting for the train Judge Parker and Mr. Davis walked up and down conversing. The crew of the train were all smiles as Mr. Davis, after shaking hands with Judge Parker and hoping he would see him soon, got aboard with Mr. Mack and Mr. Hendley. Judge Parker returned to Rosemount alone. He was in fine spirits, for he had seen his teammate and found him strong and sprightly.

National Committeemen Mack and Campau were asked what they thought about he chairmanship of the committee. "Do you think there is any chance of Senator Gorman becoming chairman?" was the question put to Mr. Campau.

"Yes," he said quickly. "I think it will be either Gorman or Sheehan. Mr. Mack said he thought Senator Gorman was the most likely choice. He knew that Mr. heehan's health was such that he did not feel equal to the work that the chairman must face. It was suggested to him that Esopus, July 20 .- The yacht Sapphire, owned by John Pierce, the New York contractor, anchored off Rosemount about 6 o'clock to-night. On board were John B. McDonald, the subway contractor, and Justice Morgan J. O'Brien of the Su preme Court. A sailor rowed ashore with an invitation to Judge Parker and his brother Fred to dine aboard the Sapphire. Both accepted, going to the yacht in the Judge's launch, the Niobe. They were still on the Sapphire at 11 o'clock to-night.

A rumor got abroad that either David B. Hill or August Belmont was on the yacht and that the dinner was planned for a secret meeting. This was denied at Rosemount. it being stated that only the four named were present.

On the night of Judge Parker's famous telegram to the St. Louis convention the Sapphire came to Rosemount with Mr. McDonald and Justice Hatch on board They were guests of Judge Parker for JUSTICE WALLOPS LAWYER. Leaves the Bench to Administer a Severe Physical Rebuke.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., July 20 .- Justice Hezekiah Hand to-day asserted his disputed right to sit in a case in which Lawyer V. W. Nash., Jr., appeared, by administering a severe thrashing to the young lawyer who was cut on the neck and has several bruises on the leg. Only with difficulty was he able to leave the court.

There had been bad blood between the lawver and the Justice for some time because of a case which was tried in another court in which the Justice was the defendent and the lawyer appeared for the plaintiff. To-day Mr. Nash, who represented a client who was tried before Justice Hand, objected to a decision and questioned the right of the latter to sit, anyway. After some argument by counsel Justice Hand arose and ordered Mr. Nash to leave the court just as the latter was offering an appeal from his decision.

"I want you to get out of this court and never come here again," said the Justice, "and I want you to get out of here damn

Mr. Nash did not move instantly and Justice Hand, leaving the bench, grabbed the young barrister and attempted to eject him forcibly. They clinched and went down on the floor, rolling about and punch-ing each other. Finally W. G. De Meza jumped in and separated the Justice and the lawyer. Mr. Nash then left the courtroom and the Justice returned to the bench none the worse for the fight.

This afternoon Mr. Nash communicated with Gov. Murphy, asking him to appoint a commission to investigate the affair with a view to having Justice Hand's commission

GAMBLERS RULE THE TOWN. Bonesteel, S. D., Calls for Troops-Pelice-

men Beaten in the Streets. SIOUX CITY, Ia., July 20 .- A despatch this afternoon from Bonesteel, S. D., the centre of the registration for the Rosebud reservation lands, says that urgent appeals have been made to both State and Federal authorities for protection. The town board to-day acknowledged the absolute helplessness of the municipal authorities to deal with the grafters who have taken complete possession of the town.

The trouble began when the town board e by i man as chief of police in place of James Nelon, former chief of police at Slouz City, who has preserved order.

The publicity of gambling has given the town bad advertising, keeping away the crowds that were expected to register there for the reservation opening. So the town board decided to run the grafters off the streets.

The new chief was then confronted with the task of driving from the streets gamblers who had paid the town for the privilege of running games in the streets. Marshall McDermott started by objecting to a three

He tried to run it out and drew a gun, but he was disarmed in a jiffy and driven away. Then the grafters, confidence men and gamblers began to riot. They held up every policeman who showed himself and robbed him of star and club and even of valuables and ended by pummelling him.

TEXTILE WORKERS TO STRIKE. Fall River, Fearing Long Labor War,

Gives Up Anniversary Celebration. FALL RIVER, Mass., July 20 .- The most important meetings of textile labor unions held in this city in many years were those to-night. Five unions met to consider the decision of the manufacturers to reduce wages and three of them voted to strike Monday. They were the weavers, slasher tenders and the loom fixers. The spinners and the carders voted to remain at work under the reduced wage schedule. This means that all of the mills will be closed Monday and that there will be a fight to the finish between the manufacturers and 80,000 operatives. The observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the incorporation of the city was called off to-night at a meeting of the Aldermante committee appointed to arrange for the event. It was decided that the business outlook is so bad that the money appropriated for the celebration ought not to be spent for that purpose.

ARMOR FOR AUTO DRIVERS. Negroes Bressed in Stage Tinware Seel

Magistrate Cornell. Two dealers in imported automobiles managed a bit of horseplay yesterday, intended to be at the expense of Magistrate Cornell. Two negro automobile drivers were taken to a costumer and rigged out in suits of stage armor. Then, each in a big French touring car, they set out for the Essex Market court. On the sides of the cars were signs reading:

"We are friends of Magistrate Cornell Please don't shoot." Going through Christie street the suits of mail were an invitation to the small boy and he hailed them with sticks and stones. The stage tinware was not impervious to these salutes, but no serious damage was done.

It was the intention of the originators of the scheme to call on Justice Cornell and ask him if he approved of the armor for chauffeur's livery, since he recom-mended the shooting of automobilists. When the party reached the court room, however, Magistrate Cornell had gone.

OUICK GIRL FOILS BURGLARS.

THEY HAD A BUGGY WAITING, BUT GOT NO BOOTY.

Had All Mrs. Schmidt's Valuables Packed When Sister Saw Shades Raised and Made Man Drop Bundles-Cop Off Duty Let Man With Bloody Hand Slip by Him.

Two spry burglars, with the aid of an accomplice and a horse and buggy, escaped last night after attempting to rob the home of Mrs. Carl Schmidt, on the top floor of 1004 Dawson street, in The Bronx, Mrs. Schmidt's husband, who was interested in Canadian gold and silver mines, committed suicide about a week ago, and it is supposed that stories that he had left considerable money attracted the burglars.

Mrs. Schmidt is in the country, and the apartments in which she and her husband lived have been closed. Her sister, Miss Adeline Beyrodt, was sitting on the stoop of her home, across the street, when she saw the curtains in the Schmidt apartments raised. She thought something was wrong and called her father, J. L. Beyrodt. He told her to investigate.

She walked up through the house, and at the fourth floor she met a man carrying two big bundles. She is an athletic girl and she grabbed him. He dropped the bundles, pushed her aside and ran downstairs. The door to James Robinson's rooms, on the third floor, was open, and the man rushed in. He ran through the apartments and climbed down the fire escape to the second floor. From there he jumped to the porch of the home of Edward Davis, next door, and thence to the ground. He landed in a flower bed, and a trail of blood which he left behind showed that he cut his hand on one of the flower pots.

It didn't take the burglar long to get to the street, but all this time Miss Beyrodt was screaming, and the occupants of the house turned out and so did the neighbors.

Policeman Passut is one of the neighbors, and as he came running from his home he met a man with a bloody hand running in the opposite direction.
"Can I help you?" asked Passut.

"No, thanks," said the runner, "I'm all right. The policeman didn't wait to stop the man. Before Passut got to the Schmidt apartments, Miss Beyrodt and the others who had preceded him had discovered a man hiding in the kitchen. He knocked over everybody who tried to stop him and shinned down the back fire escape to the second floor. He dropped the rest of the distance, scampered around to the front of the house and loped up Dawson street to Prospect avenue, which is the next corner. He wasn't much behind the burglar with the bloody hand. The two jumped into a buggy that was waiting and a third man drove them as fast as he could up Dawson street. Policeman Passut, who started down stairs to head off the second burglar, having let the first get away from him, came out of the house just as the buggy got a good start. John Link has a butcher's shop a few doors away, and his wagon was standing in front of it. Passut jumped into the wagon and, with Link and a man named Fred Allen, started after the buggy. The burglars had a horse that could sprint however, and they lost the meat wagon with the pursuers after a half mile race.

Passut then returned and consoled himself by asking the Morrisania and Tremont police to hunt for the trio on the description he gave of the buggy and burglars. An examination of the Schmidt flat showed that everything of value had been packed up to be carried away.

death a few minutes later. The family occupy the apartment on the third floor of the building. They were just about to sit down to dinner when Mr. Gonell heard a scream and an instant later a crash in the rear yard. Running down stairs he was the first to arrive at the side of his daughter. She was still breathing, and he picked her up and carried her upstairs. Dr. P. Schoonmaker was summoned to the house, but he found the girl dying. Her skull was fractured and her left arm broken. It was rumored about the neighborhood that the girl was soon to have been married and that a lovers' quarrel was responsible for her suicide; but Dr. J. M. F. Egan, the family physician, said there was no truth in the story. He said that the girl for a long time had been suffering from gastritis and had become desponden believing that she would never be well again. Pe ople in the neighborhood say she must have contemplated suicide for some time, as she had bidden farewell to Mr. Gonell brought his family here from South America several years ago and embarked in business under the firm name of Gonell & Pons at 108 Fulton street.

MAY BE A STEAMER AFIRE. Heavy Column of Smoke Seen 30 Miles Out Off Eastport, L. I.

EASTPORT, L. I., July 20 .- People in this locality are intensely interested to-night in what is believed to be a large ocean steamer on fire about thirty miles out at sea. Attention was first attracted to her about 8 o'clock this afternoon by great volumes of smoke. She was too distant to discern the outline with the unaided eve but through a powerful glass, levelled from a high position, the shape of a large steamer was vaguely apparent. A high northwest wind has prevailed since noon, and the vessel since being first sighted has been drifting out to sea, thereby creating the belief that the crew either has abandoned her or is unable to direct her course.

One of the South Beach life savers at Quogue noticed several vessels moving between the beach and the steamer this afternoon. They continued on their course in spite of a possible need of help. A vigilant watch is being maintained along the coast to-night in the hope that some of the crew or passengers of the ressel may reach the shore in the lifeboats. FIRE ISLAND, L. I., July 10 .- A heavy cloud of smoke was visible between sixteen and twenty miles off shore, southeast of Fire Island Light, this afternoon. No vessel was visible, but the column rose from one point for about five hours. The tank teamer Heolis, bound in for New York, passed this point, but did not slow down or investigate. It is thought possible that the smoke may have come from a steamer which lay to for repairs.

SCRUB WOMAN HAD $3,000 RING

FOUND IT IN WALDORF-IT HAD BEEN STOLEN FROM A GUEST.

Detectives Have Been Searching for Mrs McIntosh's Jewelry Since May 29 -Woman Sold Ring for $25-Neither She Nor Buyer Guessed Its Great Value.

The arrest yesterday of Mrs. Nellie Quinan, a scrub woman, brought out the news that there had been a jewel robbery in the Waldorf-Astoria on May 29. Mrs. Quinlan is 50 years old. She was arrested in the Hotel Plaza, where she went to work a few weeks ago after leaving the Waldorf. She is held as a suspicious person because she had knowledge of a $3,000 emerald and diamond ring which, it is alleged, was stolen, with considerable other jewelry, from the apartments of Mrs. Charles L. McIntosh of Milwaukee, Wis.

Detective Sergeants Barry and Brennan learned yesterday that Mrs. Quinlan had in her possession recently a very valuable ring. They located her and asked what she had done with it. She confessed that she had found a ring in the Waldorf and had not turned it over to the management According to her story she was scrubbing on the tenth floor about the day of the robbery when she found a little roll of paper. She picked it up and found the ring inside. The robbery occurred on the fourth floor.

Mrs. Quinlan took the ring home with her. She had no idea of its real value. She knew it was of some worth, and she says that at the suggestion of a friend she stowed it away and said nothing about it. A week ago she took the ring from its hiding place and offered to sell it to a Mrs. Wagner of 337 First avenue, with whom she some boarded. Mrs. Wagner offered her $25 for the ring and she accepted the offer, taking $5 on account. Mrs. Wagner then took possession of the ring. The detectives next looked up Mrs. Wagner. She had the ring and verified Mrs. Quinlan's story. Mrs. Wagner gave it up without a murmur. The detectives are sure for, as they have a drawing of each piece stolen. The recovered ring was the most valuable piece in the lot. Mrs. Quinlan could not throw any light on the other missing jewelry. She was cross-examined at great length by her captors, but she told only one story. The police are inclined to believe it is the truth. Just how much jewelry was stolen the detectives would not tell. At the Waldorf the management denied there had been any robbery there last May. Mrs. McIntosh, who lost the jewelry, has been living at the hotel since the robbery, but she left town a few days ago and went to Providence.
